

Country	ID	Date of reform	Short description
Austria	1	20 May 1970	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Ministry for education renamed ministry for education and art - Ministry for transport and nationalised industries renamed ministry for transport; nationalised industries are moved to the chancellor's office (one of the SPÖ's economic reform visions was to merge nationalised firms in the same sector and create more competitive units, an issue that was politically delicate and required the Chancellor's attention). - New ministry for science and research established (competencies formerly with chancellor's office, ministry for education and ministry for commerce, trade and industry) - New competencies for the ministry for foreign affairs (cultural foreign relations, UNESCO) - Two new state secretaries without portfolios (Chancellor's Office, Ministry for Social Administration) - Minister without portfolio in the Chancellor's office (interim solution until foundation of Ministry of Science and Research)
Austria	2	02 December 1971	Upon winning a parliamentary majority, Chancellor Kreisky introduced the portfolio structure he wanted (not possible due to lack of opposition support under the SPÖ minority cabinet). Kreisky sensed that quality of life issues would become increasingly important, hence the new ministry and a junior minister for family affairs. Kreisky also considered the mountain farmers as one of the SPÖ's electoral target groups (therefore a junior minister for mountain farmers). <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - New ministry for Health and Environment created (competencies formerly with Chancellor's Office, Ministry for Social Administration, Ministry for Agriculture and Forestry) - Two new state secretaries without portfolios (one in the Chancellor's Office, Ministry for Agriculture and Forestry) - State secretary without portfolio in the Chancellor's Office remains - Minister without portfolio in the Chancellor's office (interim solution before the Ministry of Health and Environment was formally established 1 Feb. 1972)
Austria	3	22 November 1972	First time the regulation of ministries is codified in a single law (mostly codifying the contents of former laws, also providing more detailed description of competencies), some cleaning-up of historical mis-location of jurisdictions, eased by single-party government. This completed a long-term agenda of administrative reformers in the bureaucracy. New complete list of ministries include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Chancellor's office - Ministry for foreign affairs - Ministry for construction and technology - Ministry for finance - Ministry for health and protection of the environment - Ministry for commerce, trade and industry - Ministry for the interior - Ministry for justice - Ministry for national defence - Ministry for agriculture and forestry - Ministry for social administration - Ministry for education and art - Ministry for transport - Ministry for science and research
Austria	4	06 November 1979	Chancellor Kreisky's spectacular turn to the women's issue by appointing four female politicians as junior ministers concerned either with aspects of women discrimination (general or in professional life) or with aspects of life said to concern women in particular. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Family policy from Chancellor's Office to Ministry for Finance - Former state secretary without portfolio in the Chancellor's Office becomes state secretary for family in the Ministry for Finance (a move made to limit the increase in junior minister positions in the Chancellor's Office) - New state secretary for habitation in the Ministry for Construction and Technology - New state secretary for consumers' protection in the Ministry for Trade, Commerce and Industry - State secretary without portfolio in the Chancellor's Office remains the same - New state secretary for women on the labour market within the Ministry for Social Administration - Former state secretary without portfolio in the Chancellor's Office becomes state secretary for women

Austria	5	28 September 1983	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Newly established ministry for family, youth and consumers (competencies concerning family were with the ministry for finance before). These were all issue domains the SPÖ wanted to be associated with (issue ownership). Also, the majority of these topics had been taken care for by female junior ministers in the preceding SPÖ single-party cabinet, positions no longer available due to the division of junior minister positions in the new coalition cabinet with the FPÖ. "Upgrading" to ministerial rank was meant to compensate for a reduction in numbers. This ministry also seemed fitting for the appointment of a female minister (at that time the SPÖ's ambition level was to have one female minister, and the one in the previous cabinet had retired and was replaced by a male minister)
